

MICHAEL MARVIN

EXPERIENCE SUMMARY

Prior to joining Gabler-Youngston, Michael attended Southern Polytechnic State University (now Kennesaw State University, Marietta campus), where he studied as an undergraduate in the school's 5-year professional Architecture program. Additionally, he worked for the Architecture department's primary office. His duties included the distribution of information through inter-departmental correspondence, design related tasks for various conferences and events held at the school, assistance in completing professional projects within the department headed up by faculty and staff, and general assistance of the Architecture Department's office administrator. As an associate with Gabler-Youngston, Michael's work focuses on aiding and providing support to the firm's principles and project managers for their design goals and the direction of the firm.
